Somewhere to belong, something to be proud of.

Every young person needs a space where they can be themselves and just create. At The EQ Lab they step into a real working studio and get hands-on, one to one with their own tutor, whether that is mixing on professional decks, writing a song, recording their own vocals or settling in over a game. For your home, that is more than an afternoon out. It is genuine engagement, a positive focus for the week, and real progress you can bring into their reviews, care plans and outcome reports.

Reaches the hard to engage

Music gets through to young people who switch off from most activities. Plenty surprise themselves, and their key workers, once they are behind the decks.

Progress you can evidence

Every session builds skills, confidence and a real sense of achievement, all of it easy to record in reviews and care planning.

A calmer, purposeful week

A regular visit gives young people something to look forward to and work towards, channelling energy into something positive.

Raised aspirations

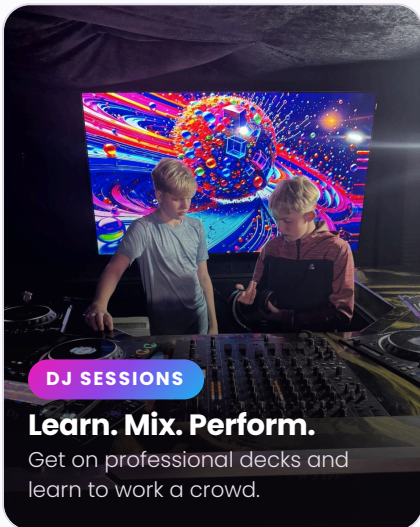

Real industry kit and real skills show young people a future to get excited about, not just a way to pass the time.

Give them time with a purpose. Instead of days spent hanging around, get them into something creative they can be proud of.

The EQ Lab team

No experience needed. Nothing is off limits.

Each visit is a menu, not a lesson plan. Every session is one to one, a single young person with their own tutor, so they can try their hand at whatever appeals, find what clicks, and take it as far as they like. There is something here whether they think of themselves as musical or not, and no pressure to produce anything, just a chance to get stuck in.

Built around your home.

Every home is different, so every package is shaped around you. Every session is one to one, a single young person with their own tutor, so they get full, focused attention with nobody else to compete with. It suits care home residents who do far better with individual support and a consistent, familiar face. With up to three sessions in a day, you can give several of your young people a session of their own. Start with a four-week trial to see how they take to it, then keep it going as a regular part of their routine.
